Time Passages

As I reflect on 2022, what strikes me is how uneven the experience of time passing, or time passages, is. Time can crawl or stand still. And then suddenly, we're propelled into a future that we barely understand. And repeat.

Earlier this year, Luke Heald, OsgoodePD's Manager of International Programs, devised a simple, yet clever game for a team social event. He chose events that had occurred during the pandemic, either newsworthy or significant to the team only, and asked players to put those events in chronological order. You will likely not be surprised to hear that this task was difficult. For many of us, the passage of time seemed to collapse during the peak of pandemic restrictions. Entire years disappeared into sameness, day after day, and it seemed like time was standing still. There was a "BP" era and there would be an "AP" era, with a time gap in between. Read more

Oh What Fun!

On December 6, we returned to our annual tradition of a fun-filled holiday event for Professional LLM students. About 60 of us bowled, laser-tagged, photo-boothed, and pizza-partied to our hearts' content. It was a great antidote to the busy-ness of the end of the Fall term. It was an evening of friendship, laughter, and a lot of beginners' luck on the lanes!
