Deepen your knowledge. Challenge your perspective.

Osgoode's Part-Time Professional LLM in Criminal Law and Procedure gives lawyers and professionals working within the criminal law field the opportunity to bring fresh insight to their practice. Students have the opportunity to explore a wide range of pressing issues including evidence, white collar crimes, punishment and international criminal law from historical, theoretical and empirical perspectives.

“I often wondered how I would balance the program with the stressful demands of private practice. However, I can say confidently that I struck a successful balance due to the flexibility, support and encouragement from my professors, the administrative staff and my colleagues. The experience of Osgoode's Criminal Law & Procedure LLM program was a challenge that I enjoyed and will be a memorable event in my educational and professional career.”

Shauna Pemberton, LLB, LLM
Lawyer, Law Office of Shauna Pemberton

“Osgoode's LLM in Criminal Law & Procedure is truly exceptional. The part-time, distance learning option provided the necessary flexibility to pursue my degree, while allowing me to maintain my professional and family obligations. The collective insight, knowledge and rich interaction with instructors and classmates was an invaluable component of my LLM experience, and has enriched my life, both professionally and personally.”

Required Courses

Problems of Proof: Advanced Perspectives on the Law of Evidence [3 credits]

The law of evidence occupies a distinctive position in the administration of criminal justice. This course builds upon basic knowledge of the laws of criminal evidence, seeking to expose and assess the deeper tensions, trends, and problematics that animate this fascinating element of the criminal justice system.

The Theory and Practice of Punishment [3 credits]

This course delves into the theoretical and empirical underpinnings of criminal law through an examination of the classic and modern debates about punishment. Key concepts such as deterrence, rehabilitation, incapacitation, retribution and denunciation are critically examined. Topics include: strict discipline, privatization of prisons, conditional sentences, aboriginal sentencing circles and the New Zealand Family Group Conference.

Issues in Criminal Law: History, Evolution and Theoretical Approaches [6 credits]

Students explore the origins of key elements of current criminal law, from blood feuds and the ordeal, to public prosecutions, the origins of policing and current police-related issues, rights to counsel, key changes in legislation, including laws and policing powers pertaining to gangs and organized crime, mandatory-minimum sentencing, imprisonment, and alternative dispute resolution. This course also introduces students to contemporary debates in criminology, while demonstrating a range of research methods and approaches.

Criminal Law and the Charter: Implications and Expectations [6 credits]

This course examines the impact of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms on criminal law and procedure. Students examine the historical evolution of the constitutionalization of criminal law and procedure in Canada, including the theoretical and empirical debate about the relation between due process and crime control. It involves an examination of the major decisions of the courts and their legal repercussions in fields such as detention and arrest, search and seizure, the exclusionary rule, the presumption of innocence, the right to counsel, trial within a reasonable time, jury selection, discovery, cruel and unusual punishment, the insanity defence, regulatory offences, hate crimes and sexual assault.
