The Osgoode Certificate in Mining Law

Now in its 8th year, the Osgoode Certificate in Mining Law delivers an expert faculty to explore all phases of mining activity. You will come away with practical legal knowledge and tools you can use to help your clients and organization successfully navigate this challenging industry.

The mining business raises complex ownership, regulatory, contractual, environmental and community issues. If you are involved in this industry, you need to understand the legal and business risks associated with this dynamic sector.

This unique Osgoode Certificate is designed for mining lawyers, industry professionals and executives that want to unearth knowledge, strategies and tactics that they can use immediately to minimize risk and better meet the needs of their clients and companies.

The mining industry has faced numerous cycles in the past and looks for efficient ways to deliver the vital raw materials while facing important environmental and societal challenges. Explore topics related to ESG, HR issues in mining, how to finance mining projects, working with Indigenous communities, and more throughout the program.

Learn from an expert faculty of lawyers, geologists, regulators, financiers, consultants and business executives, from private practice and industry, and get the practical tools you need to manage these complex and everchanging challenges.
