

March 2022

Greetings and welcome to OsgoodePD's first newsletter.

Our aim is to give you a regular, small sample of the what, who, when and why of our work. OsgoodePD's mission is to provide thoughtful and timely lifelong learning to legal professionals and the many others in our society who have legal risks or responsibilities in their jobs. In carrying out that mission, we have created a unique range and depth of offerings that may interest you either as a learner or potential instructor, or spark an idea for something new. We want to hear from you on how we can best meet your needs, and I welcome you to contact me.

Take care,

Victoria Watkins
Executive Director, Osgoode Professional Development &
Assistant Dean, Osgoode Hall Law School

Meeting the needs of our healthcare industry.

The COVID pandemic has reinforced both the critical importance and vulnerability of our healthcare system. There are hundreds of thousands of Canadians in the healthcare workforce, and Canadian healthcare is tightly woven with legal requirements, restrictions, risks and responsibilities. To meet the needs of those working, or advising, in the healthcare industry, OsgoodePD has multiple offerings ranging from 1-day short courses and annual conferences, to 5-day certificates, to a 2-year part-time Professional LL.M. in Health Law. Alumni Profile David Cade

On Osgoode's Tax Law LL.M., how it led to David's Canadian Tax Foundation-Fasken Martineau DuMoulin Award, and his advice for those on a similar path. Read more

Global legal relationships are changing faster than ever.

Osgoode's new Summer Program on Governance Through Law will have students explore important current issues involving the rule of law and its relationship with governance, rights and national economic interests, and come away with an understanding of how sovereign debt and financial crises affect the lives of individuals around the world.
